INTRODUCTION AND INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

Everytown for Gun Safety is the nation's largest gun-violence-prevention organization, with over five million supporters across all fifty states, including tens of thousands in Illinois. It was founded in 2014 as the combined effort of Mayors Against Illegal Guns, a national, bipartisan coalition of mayors combatting illegal guns and gun trafficking, and Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America, an organization formed after twenty children and six adults were murdered by a gunman with an AR-15 rifle—the type of weapon regulated by the law challenged here—in an elementary school in Newtown, Connecticut. The mayors of thirty-two Illinois cities are now members of Mayors Against Illegal Guns. Everytown also includes a large network of gun-violence survivors who are empowered to share their stories and advocate for responsible gun laws.

Everytown has drawn on its expertise to file briefs in numerous Second Amendment cases, including challenges to prohibitions like those at issue in this case, offering historical and doctrinal analysis that might otherwise be overlooked. See, e.g., Worman v. Healy, No. 18-1545 (1st Cir.); Ass'n of N.J. Rifle & Pistol Clubs, Inc. v. Att'y Gen. N.J., No. 18-3170 (3d Cir.); Kolbe v. Hogan, No. 14-1945 (4th Cir.) (en banc); Hatfield v. Barr, No. 18-2385 (7th Cir.); Peruta v. Cnty. of San Diego, No. 10-56971 (9th Cir.) (en banc). It seeks to do the same here.¹

This case involves a challenge to a Cook County ordinance regulating assault weapons and large-capacity magazines. Four circuits have heard challenges to similar laws on the merits—including this Circuit, which confronted a materially identical law—and all four upheld the laws as constitutional under the Supreme Court's decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008). See Friedman v. City of Highland Park, 784 F.3d 406 (7th Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 447

¹ An addendum of historical gun laws accompanies this brief. All parties consent to the filing of this brief, and no counsel for any party authored it in whole or part. Apart from amicus curiae, no person contributed money intended to fund the brief's preparation and submission.

(2015); see also Kolbe v. Hogan, 849 F.3d 114 (4th Cir. 2017) (en banc), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 469 (2017); N.Y. State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Cuomo, 804 F.3d 242 (2d Cir. 2015) (NYSRPA), cert. denied sub nom. Shew v. Malloy, 136 S. Ct. 2486 (2016); Heller v. District of Columbia, 670 F.3d 1244 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (Heller II). Other courts have done the same. One state law, for example, was upheld twice in the last year—first by a federal district court, and then by the state’s high court. See Worman v. Healy, 293 F. Supp. 3d 251 (D. Mass. 2018), appeal docketed, No. 18-1545 (1st Cir.); Commonwealth v. Cassidy, 96 N.E.3d 691 (Mass. 2018), cert. denied, — S. Ct. —, 2018 WL 3859789 (Oct. 1, 2018).

Claiming that this Court’s decision in “Friedman was wrongly decided,” the plaintiffs ask the Court (at 17, 20) to “revisit and replace” it with their preferred test. A panel, of course, has no authority to “replace” circuit precedent without the acquiescence of the full Court. See 7th Cir. R. 40(e). But even if it were inclined to “revisit” the issue, the Court should reject the plaintiffs’ proposed test and uphold the law. Everytown files this brief to highlight the problems with that test, to provide an independent reason why the law is constitutional, and to discuss research by Everytown showing the link between the regulated weapons and mass shootings.

To begin, the plaintiffs ask this Court to adopt a dangerous and illogical rule under which firearms become effectively immune from regulation the instant they are deemed in “common use” based on nationwide sales and manufacturing figures. This market-share “common use” test should be rejected out of hand. It divorces the Second Amendment from the self-defense right it protects. It skews incentives for gunmakers and governments alike. It cannot be reconciled with either the Supreme Court’s decision in Heller or common sense. And it is inconsistent with core principles of federalism. Indeed, this Court in Friedman expressly rejected the exact same theory of “common use” as circular, and the D.C. Circuit implicitly rejected it in favor of a test more closely linked to the core right recognized in Heller: “the right of self-defense.” 554 U.S. at 632.

As this Court has held, and all other circuits have agreed, the proper test in Second Amendment cases is twofold: There is first a “historical inquiry” to determine whether the law burdens conduct that falls within the scope of the right as traditionally understood. Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 701 (7th Cir. 2011). At this stage, the court may consider whether there is a “longstanding tradition” of “state laws imposing similar restrictions.” United States v. Rene E., 583 F.3d 8, 12 (1st Cir. 2009). Such “longstanding” laws, the Supreme Court explained in Heller, are treated as tradition-based “exceptions” by virtue of their “historical justifications,” 554 U.S. at 635, and are thus “not subject to further Second Amendment review,” Ezell, 651 F.3d at 703. But if the law is not sufficiently longstanding and burdens protected conduct, “there must be a second inquiry into the strength of the government’s justification” for regulating. Id.

Cook County’s ordinance is constitutional at either step. It is constitutional at step one because there is a century’s worth of regulations on semiautomatic weapons capable of firing a large number of rounds without reloading, some even more restrictive than Cook County’s law. These regulations—which even the National Rifle Association endorsed at the time—confirm that the ordinance is consistent with the historical understanding of the Second Amendment, and is thus a longstanding, constitutional regulation under Heller.

The ordinance is also constitutional at step two because, even if it did not enjoy such a long historical pedigree, it would still satisfy intermediate scrutiny. As Everytown’s research confirms, there is a substantial relationship between regulating assault weapons and large-capacity magazines and Cook County’s undeniably important interest in preventing and mitigating mass shootings and daily gun violence.

ARGUMENT

I. The Second Amendment does not guarantee access to assault weapons and large-capacity magazines.

A. The plaintiffs' "common use" test is illogical.

The Supreme Court held in Heller that the Second Amendment protects “the right of law-abiding, responsible citizens to use arms in defense of hearth and home,” but does not guarantee “a right to keep and carry any weapon whatsoever in any manner whatsoever and for whatever purpose.” 554 U.S. at 626, 635. It does not protect, for example, civilian access to the highly dangerous “weapons that are most useful in military service—M-16 rifles and the like”—which, the Court made clear, “may be banned.” Id. at 627; see Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 142 (“Heller’s clear and dispositive pronouncement: There is no Second Amendment protection for ‘M-16 rifles and the like.’”); NYSRPA, 804 F.3d at 256 (“Heller expressly highlighted” that “the fully automatic M-16 rifle” could be prohibited “without implicating the Second Amendment.”). At stake in this case is whether the result should be different for weapons that a prior Congress determined are “virtually indistinguishable in practical effect” from those that Heller expressly found unprotected. H.R. Rep. No. 103-489, at 18 (1994), reprinted in 1994 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1820.

The plaintiffs offer only one reason why the result should differ: because assault weapons and large-capacity magazines are now “in common use for lawful purposes,” Appellants’ Br. 35, whereas the M-16 is not commonly used because the federal government has effectively prohibited its civilian use. But the assault weapons that Cook County’s law regulates have been found to make up “less than 3%” of the civilian gun stock, and “less than 1% of Americans own[] such weapons.” Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 126. That is a far cry from the absolute prohibition on handguns at issue in Heller.

As this Court explained in Friedman, “what line separates ‘common’ from ‘uncommon’ ownership is something [Heller] did not say.” 784 F.3d at 409 (finding “uncertainty” as to whether assault weapons are “commonly owned” based on sales totals); see generally Cody J. Jacobs, End the Popularity Contest, 83 Tenn. L. Rev. 231 (2015). “The Heller majority said nothing to confirm that it was sponsoring the popularity test.” Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 142. And even if it had, the plaintiffs are silent on what numerical threshold must be reached before a firearm achieves “common use” sufficient to be constitutionally immune from regulation. If a million people own a particular weapon, is that enough? How about a few hundred thousand? See, e.g., Caetano v. Massachusetts, 136 S. Ct. 1027, 1033 (2016) (Alito, J., concurring) (expressing his view that a weapon owned by 200,000 people—or .06% of the American population—is in common use). Is it a regional test or a national test? Does it look to ownership numbers or manufacturing numbers? If a survey revealed that half a million people own firearms without serial numbers, would the federal serialization requirement suddenly become unconstitutional because unmarked firearms are in common use? If not, why not? See also Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 135–36 (asking these and other questions). The plaintiffs do not answer any of these questions.

More fundamentally, “relying on how common a weapon is at the time of litigation [is] circular.” Friedman, 784 F.3d at 409. As this Court pointed out in Friedman, “it would be absurd to say that the reason why a particular weapon can be banned is that there is a statute banning it, so that it isn’t commonly owned. A law’s existence can’t be the source of its own constitutional validity.” Id.; see also Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 141; Joseph Blocher & Darrell A.H. Miller, Lethality, Public Carry, and Adequate Alternatives, 53 Harv. J. on Legis. 279, 288–89 (2016) (discussing the “central circularity” that plagues common use: “what is common depends largely on what is, and has been, subject to regulation”). The constitutionality of a weapon prohibition should take into account how dangerous the weapon is; it should not turn on “how widely [the weapon] is circulated to law-abiding citizens by the time a bar on its private possession has been enacted and challenged.” Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 141.

Consider just some of the absurd results that a market-share “common use” test would produce. By focusing on total sales and manufacturing figures, the test would give the firearms industry “the ability to unilaterally make new [highly dangerous] firearms protected simply by manufacturing and heavily marketing them” before the government has had the chance to assess their danger and determine whether to regulate them. Jacobs, End the Popularity Contest, 83 Tenn. L. Rev. at 265. And because American firearm ownership is extremely concentrated—just 3% of adults possess half the country’s guns—a small number of people would dictate the Second Amendment’s meaning. See Lois Beckett, Meet America’s Gun Super-Owners—With An Average of 17 Firearms Each, The Trace (Sept. 20, 2016), <https://goo.gl/FSsU2w>; see also Alex Yablon, Most Californians Who Own ‘Assault Rifles’ Have 10+ Guns, The Trace (Nov. 12, 2018), <https://goo.gl/aKEtmi> (reporting research finding that “four out of five assault rifles in [California] are owned by people who own 10 or more guns”). Indeed, on this theory, once gun manufacturers ensure that a particular gun has achieved whatever market penetration is enough to make it common, that type of gun would then become forever constitutionally immune from regulation. If that were the law, it would “put[] a great deal of power”—constitutional power—“into the hands of gun manufacturers” and gun enthusiasts Id. at 267.

By doing so, it would create perverse incentives for manufacturers to overproduce the very types of firearms that most warrant regulatory attention, and to flood the market with firearms possessing new—and potentially dangerous—technology before regulators could assess their safety. See Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 141. That would undoubtedly “hinder efforts to require consumer safety features on guns.” Jacobs, End the Popularity Contest, 83 Tenn. L. Rev. at 267. Given the emergence of new firearm technology (like 3-D-printed gun components undetectable using traditional screening methods), and given the inevitability of future technological developments, the plaintiffs’ common-use theory, if endorsed by this Court, would pose serious threats to public safety. Id.

These concerns about aggressive marketing-and-sales campaigns by manufacturers are not merely remote or hypothetical. They can be seen by looking at the weapons at issue in this very case. The AR-15 rifle—which the plaintiffs acknowledge (at 23–24) is “the foremost representative” of the modern assault weapon—“did not catch on in the American market in a significant way until the late 1980s.” ECF No. 61-5, at 2 (Affidavit of Robert Spitzer), in Worman v. Healey, No. 17-cv-10107-WGY (D. Mass. Dec. 15, 2017); see also NRA Staff, I Have This Old Gun: Colt AR-15 SPI, American Rifleman (July 31, 2014), <https://goo.gl/4HZMhQ> (statement of Martin K.A. Morgan, at 4:15-5:00). It was only after the federal prohibition expired in 2004 that the gun industry focused its marketing resources on assault weapons. It first promoted these weapons as “tactical rifles” or “black rifles,” and later— after a concerted post-Heller campaign launched in 2009 by the firearms industry’s chief trade association, the National Shooting Sports Foundation— as “modern sporting rifles.”² As a result of these coordinated industry efforts, the civilian sales of assault weapons skyrocketed. See id. (noting that the AR-15’s popularity underwent a “fundamental evolution” after 2004, causing civilian sales to “explode[]”). These 21st-century marketing-and-sales strategies should have no bearing on the meaning of the United States Constitution.

And this is to say nothing of the federalism consequences of adopting a test that looks to nationwide manufacturing and sales totals. Under that test, whenever a new, potentially dangerous firearm feature became available, states would either have to prohibit it immediately, and in unison, or else forfeit their ability to do so going forward. If some states chose to gather more information before regulating, or if their citizens simply had a different position on gun policy, those legislative policy judgments would have constitutional effect far beyond those states’ borders.

Legislators' decisions in some parts of the country, however, should not make laws in other parts any "more or less open to challenge under the Second Amendment." Friedman, 784 F.3d at 408. If they did, that "would imply that no jurisdiction other than the United States as a whole can regulate firearms. But that's not what Heller concluded." Id. at 412. Because our Constitution "establishes a federal republic where local differences are cherished as elements of liberty," federalism is "no less part of the Constitution than is the Second Amendment." Id. The Supreme Court's decision in Heller (as applied to the states in McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742 (2010)) "does not foreclose all possibility of experimentation" by state and local governments, Friedman, 784 F.3d at 412, but rather permits them to do what they have long done in the realm of firearm legislation: "experiment with solutions to admittedly serious problems," Jackson v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 746 F.3d 953, 970 (9th Cir. 2014); see also McDonald, 561 U.S. at 785 (noting that "[s]tate and local experimentation with reasonable firearms regulations will continue under the Second Amendment"). The plaintiffs' test would eviscerate their ability to do so.

At the same time, the plaintiffs' test also has the potential to underprotect the Second Amendment right by "creat[ing] an incentive for governments that are interested in restricting access to firearms to ban new weapons completely before they can become popular," even if those weapons would be "very effective for self-defense." Jacobs, End the Popularity Contest, 83 Tenn. L. Rev. at 265. But, as scholars have remarked, "[i]f heavy regulation can prevent a weapon from becoming a constitutionally protected 'Arm,' then the Second Amendment right seems hollow indeed." Blocher & Miller, Lethality, at 288.

The rights enumerated in our Constitution protect individual liberty by restraining the power of popularly elected legislators. Yet the plaintiffs' constitutional theory would give policymakers (as well as private industry and a small group of consumers) unprecedented power to define the scope of the federal constitutional right—either by broadening it or by narrowing it.

Thus, although the plaintiffs claim (at 24) that upholding this law would confer too much power on the elected “branches of government [to] set[] the breadth and depth of the right to keep and bear arms,” it is actually their test that would do so—by granting this power to governments and gunmakers alike—and it would affect everyone, not just constituents. That cannot be the law.

To see why, suppose that in 2004 Congress had renewed the federal prohibition on assault weapons and large-capacity magazines, rather than let it lapse. Had Congress made that policy decision, those weapons would not be in common use today, and thus would not be protected on the plaintiffs’ market-share theory. The answer should not be any different because Congress instead decided to let the law lapse. A single 21st-century legislative decision should not dictate whether a different legislative judgment made a decade later comports with the Second Amendment. Yet that is the upshot of the plaintiffs’ common-use theory.

Or suppose that the federal machine-gun prohibition were repealed by one Congress and then reenacted verbatim by the next, just two years later. Would the prohibition suddenly be unconstitutional if, in the interim, a few hundred thousand gun enthusiasts bought three guns each? Or suppose that, instead of a temporary repeal, a tiny handful of gun manufacturers, in an effort to bring about the same result, suddenly began selling machine guns, and then several hundred thousand people snatched up three guns each. If those people were prosecuted, would they have a Second Amendment defense under a sales-and-manufacturing-based common-use test? Or would the fact that they broke the law—the very law they would be challenging as unconstitutional—render them outside the scope of Second Amendment protection?

Or consider this: some states enacted prohibitions on assault weapons and large-capacity magazines while the federal prohibition was in effect, and these prohibitions mirrored the federal law. On the plaintiffs’ theory, these laws were constitutional when they were enacted, because the federal prohibition precluded common use. But then they somehow became unconstitutional at some point in time since then—when the apparently dispositive (but entirely undefined) numerical threshold was achieved at some assembly line or checkout counter in another state. That is not what Heller stands for.

This Court should reject the argument that “the so-called popularity of the banned assault weapons—which were owned by less than 1% of Americans as recently as 2013—inhibits any efforts by the other 99% to stop those weapons from being used again and again to perpetrate mass slaughters.” Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 141. That argument is as “illogical” as it is dangerous. Id. at 143

B. The plaintiffs must show that the regulated weapons are commonly used or are reasonably necessary for self-defense, and that adequate alternatives are unavailable.

To the extent that “common use” should play any role in the constitutional analysis outside the context of a total prohibition on a class of arms (like the handgun prohibition at issue in Heller), it should be tied to “the purpose of the right to keep and bear arms.” Blocher & Miller, Lethality, at 291. The test should focus, in other words, on whether the regulated firearms are commonly used or are reasonably necessary for self-defense, which Heller holds is the core of the right. See 554 U.S. at 635. The D.C. Circuit, in upholding a similar law, has adopted that approach—and implicitly rejected the plaintiffs’ market-share common-use test—by asking whether assault weapons “are commonly used or are useful specifically for self-defense.” See Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1261. If the answer is no, they are not among the “Arms” protected by the right. If the answer is yes, a law restricting their use will still be upheld if it is sufficiently longstanding or can satisfy scrutiny.

This formulation of “common use” is more consistent with Heller than the plaintiffs’ broad theory of common use, which considers any purpose that is not unlawful (and which would nullify any prohibition on a weapon in common use, see Appellants’ Br. 34). The Supreme Court in Heller struck down Washington, D.C.’s handgun law because it “amount[ed] to a prohibition of an entire class of ‘arms’ that is overwhelmingly chosen by American society for th[e] lawful purpose” of “self- defense.” 554 U.S. at 628 (emphasis added). And the Court gave “many reasons” why “the American people have considered the handgun to be the quintessential self-defense weapon,” including portability and flexibility, and hence why access to long guns (which D.C.’s law permitted) was not an adequate alternative. Id. at 629; see Friedman, 784 F.3d at 411 (“Heller held that the availability of long guns does not save a ban on handgun ownership,” and listed “some of the reasons, including ease of accessibility and use, that citizens might prefer handguns to long guns for self-defense.”); Kolbe, 849 F.3d at 132 (“[T]he Court [in Heller] repeatedly made comments underscoring the status of handguns as ‘the most preferred firearm in the nation to keep and use for protection of one’s home and family.’”). The plaintiffs, by contrast, do nothing of the sort. Although they assert (at 24) that assault weapons and large-capacity magazines are commonly “use[d] . . . for . . . self-defense,” they do not point to any evidence supporting that assertion—and certainly none showing that these weapons are so commonly used for self-defense that their availability is constitutionally guaranteed.

Nor do the plaintiffs claim that these weapons are reasonably necessary for self-defense—that is, “useful specifically for self-defense,” Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1261. In other cases, for example, plaintiffs have speculated that these weapons are more effective for self-defense because they are more intimidating than other firearms, and because criminals might have them, and people should be able to fight fire with fire. But that logic has no stopping point. See Blocher & Miller, Lethality, at 289 (describing the “arms race” and “one-way ratchet” problem that would ensue on this constitutional theory: “Because the bad guys carry pistols, civilians need pistols; because the bad guys carry AR-15s (to counter the pistols), civilians need AR-15s; and so on”). And even if one might be able to conjure up fanciful scenarios in which military-style features and more than ten rounds of ammunition might be necessary for self-defense, speculation alone cannot render the judgment of the people’s elected representatives unconstitutional.

II. History confirms that the Second Amendment does not guarantee access to assault weapons and large-capacity magazines.

A historical assessment confirms that Cook County’s ordinance is constitutional. A law does not violate the Second Amendment if it “regulates activity falling outside the scope of the Second Amendment right as it was understood at the relevant historical moment.” Ezell, 651 F.3d at 702–03. As the Supreme Court explained in Heller, “longstanding prohibitions” fall outside the scope of the right because they are treated as tradition-based “exceptions” by virtue of their “historical justifications.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 627, 635; see Fyock v. City of Sunnyvale, 779 F.3d 991, 997 (9th Cir. 2015) (“[L]ongstanding prohibitions . . . fall outside of the Second Amendment’s scope.”); United States v. Marzzarella, 614 F.3d 85, 91 (3d Cir. 2010) (“[L]ongstanding limitations are exceptions to the right to bear arms.”); NYSRPA, 804 F.3d at 258 n.76 (concluding same). “These restrictions, as well as others similarly rooted in history, were left intact by the Second Amendment and by Heller.” United States v. Rene E., 583 F.3d 8, 12 (1st Cir. 2009).

To qualify as longstanding under Heller, a regulation need not “mirror limits that were on the books in 1791”—or in this case, 1868. United States v. Skoien, 614 F.3d 638, 641 (7th Cir. 2010) (en banc); see Ezell, 651 F.3d at 702 (“[I]f the claim concerns a state or local law, the ‘scope’ question asks how the right was publicly understood when the Fourteenth Amendment was proposed and ratified.”); Gould v. Morgan, 907 F.3d 659, 669 (1st Cir. 2018) (“Because the challenge here is directed at a state law, the pertinent point in time would be 1868 (when the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified).”). To the contrary, even “early twentieth century regulations” may qualify as longstanding. Fyock, 779 F.3d at 997. For example, “Heller deemed a ban on private possession of machine guns to be obviously valid” even though “states didn’t begin to regulate private use of machine guns until 1927,” and Congress didn’t begin “regulating machine guns at the federal level” until 1934. Friedman, 784 F.3d at 408. Heller also considered “prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill” to be sufficiently longstanding, 554 U.S. at 626, despite the fact that they too “are of 20th Century vintage,” Skoien, 614 F.3d at 640–41 (explaining that “[t]he first federal statute disqualifying felons from possessing firearms was not enacted until 1938,” while “the ban on possession by all felons was not enacted until 1961”).

Thus, even laws that are “firmly rooted in the twentieth century and likely bear[] little resemblance to laws in effect” at ratification can be deemed longstanding under Heller. Booker, 644 F.3d at 24. Indeed, the First Circuit has upheld a law prohibiting juveniles from possessing firearms based “on the existence of a longstanding tradition” of “state laws imposing similar restrictions.” Rene E., 583 F.3d at 12. The court did so because nine states and the city of Chicago “enacted similar statutes” around the turn of the 20th century. Id. at 14. The regulation in this case enjoys a similarly longstanding tradition. For nearly a century, states have regulated semiautomatic weapons capable of firing a large number of rounds without reloading. The law is therefore consistent with our “historical tradition,” and constitutional under Heller. 554 U.S. at 627.

States have restricted access to semiautomatic firearms capable of quickly firing a large number of rounds since they first became common at the turn of the twentieth century, often regulating them—along with fully automatic weapons—as “machine guns.” See, e.g., Robert J. Spitzer, Gun Law History in the United States and Second Amendment Rights, 80 Law & Contemp. Probs. 55, 68–71, 81–82 (2017). Some of these restrictions were in essence total prohibitions, and hence significantly broader than Cook County’s ordinance, which reaches only a particular subset of semiautomatic long guns with military features.

A 1927 Rhode Island law, for instance, prohibited the “manufacture, s[ale], purchase or possess[ion]” of a “machine gun,” defined as “any weapon which shoots more than twelve shots semi-automatically without reloading.” 1927 R.I. Pub. Laws 256, §§ 1, 4; see also 1927 Mich. Pub. Acts 888, § 3 (prohibiting “any machine gun or firearm which can be fired more than sixteen times without reloading”). Likewise, in 1933, California made it a felony to possess “any firearms of the kind commonly known as a machine gun,” defined as any firearm “which [is] automatically fed after each discharge from or by means of clips, discs, drums, belts or other separable mechanical device having a capacity of greater than ten cartridges.” 1933 Cal. Acts 1170, § 3. That same year, Minnesota did the same. 1933 Minn. Laws 231.

Other states subjected semiautomatic weapons with large magazine capacities to much stricter regulation than other firearms, often with requirements that were so onerous as to tantamount to a prohibition. Ohio, for example, made it a felony to “possess” any “semi-automatic[]” firearm that “shoots more than eighteen shots . . . without reloading” unless granted a permit, which required the applicant to deposit a $5,000 bond. 1933 Ohio Laws 189. And Virginia, in 1934, made it illegal for residents to “[p]ossess[] or use” any gun “from which more than sixteen shots or bullets may be . . . semiautomatically or otherwise discharged without reloading” if ammunition was “in the immediate vicinity thereof.” 1934 Va. Acts 137, §§ 1(a), 4(d).

Around the same time, Congress enacted a law “[t]o control the possession, sale, transfer, and use of pistols and other dangerous weapons in the District of Columbia,” making it a crime to “possess any machine gun,” defined as “any firearm which shoots . . . semiautomatically more than twelve shots without loading.” 47 Stat. 650 (1932), ch. 465, §§ 1, 14. Notably, the National Rifle Association “urged” enactment of this law, writing to the bill’s sponsor:

It is our earnest hope that your committee will speedily report the bill favorably to the Senate as it is our desire this legislation be enacted for the District of Columbia, in which case it can then be used as a guide throughout the States of the Union, some seven or eight of which have already enacted similar legislation.

S. Rep. No. 575, at 4–6 (1932). The NRA’s endorsement was emblematic of a wider consensus on prohibiting certain semiautomatic weapons. Both the 1927 National Crime Commission Firearm Act and the 1928 Uniform Firearms Act, for example, criminalized possession of “any firearm which shoots more than twelve shots semi-automatically without reloading,” setting the national standard for laws prohibiting possession of semi-automatic firearms with large magazine capacities. Report of Firearms Committee, 38th Conference Handbook of the National Conference on Uniform State Laws and Proceedings of the Annual Meeting 422–23 (1928).

Throughout this period, legislatures also specifically regulated magazine size (in the context of laws regulating automatic weapons), adopting requirements that were stricter than Cook County’s 10-round limit. To take just a few examples: South Dakota and Texas had a five-round limit, while Illinois, Louisiana, and South Carolina had an eight-round limit. 1933 S.D. Sess. Laws 245, § 1; 1933 Tex. Gen. Laws 219, § 1; 1931 Ill. Laws 452, § 1; 1932 La. Acts 336, § 1; 1934 S.C. Acts 1288, § 1.

More broadly, Cook County’s ordinance law is part of a long historical tradition of legislatures prohibiting weapons with features that they believed posed heightened risks to public safety, either because those features were more lethal or because they were more suitable for use in crime. This tradition has included not only prohibitions on machine guns (which were defined to include semi-automatic long guns), but also prohibitions on particularly dangerous knives like bowie knives or switchblades, as well as silencers and certain highly concealable pistols—while leaving adequate alternatives for self-defense available. See, e.g., 1837 Ala. Acts 7, § 1 (bowie knives); 1838 Tenn. Pub. Acts 200, ch. 137 (same); 1881 Ark. Acts 191 (pocket pistols and “any kind of cartridge for any pistol”); 1879 Tenn. Pub. Acts 135, ch. 96 § 1 (“belt or pocket pistols, or revolvers, or any other kind of pistols, except army or navy pistol”); 1907 Ala. Laws 80, § 1 (similar); 1903 S.C. Sess. Laws 127, § 1 (similar); 1883 Tenn. Pub. Acts 17 (“any pistol cartridges”); 1909 Me. Laws 141 (silencers); 1912 Vt. Acts and Resolves 310, § 1 (same); 1913 Minn. Laws 55 (same).

This history demonstrates that Cook County’s regulation of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines is “longstanding” under Heller and Skoien. And, like the early-20th-century regulations that Heller deemed longstanding—for instance, “prohibitions on possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill”—Cook County’s more limited regulation is “presumptively lawful.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 626–27 n.26. It thus does not burden a “right secured by the Second Amendment.” Id. at 626.

III. The use of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines makes mass shootings and other gun-violence incidents deadlier.

Even if the regulation were not longstanding, it should still be upheld as constitutional under intermediate scrutiny.³ As this Court recognized in Friedman, “assault weapons with large-capacity magazines can fire more shots, faster, and thus can be more dangerous in aggregate.” 784 F.3d at 411. And the data backs this up: Everytown’s analysis, as well as other relevant research, demonstrates that the use of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines—whether in mass shootings or in day-to-day gun violence—results in more people being shot, more injuries per victim, and more deaths. Cook County thus has a strong public interest in reducing the risk of harm to its residents by prohibiting the possession and use of such weapons, and the ordinance is a reasonably tailored attempt to address this serious public-safety concern.

Everytown’s research. Relying largely on press coverage and FBI data, Everytown has tracked and documented mass shootings since 2013 and has released several reports summarizing this data. While Everytown’s research cannot present a comprehensive dataset of the firearms and magazines used in every mass shooting (the reality of gun violence in the United States is that mass shootings are so frequent that this kind of information is not available in every instance), the available information indicates that assault weapons and large-capacity magazines make shootings significantly more deadly.

For example, data from Everytown's continued tracking of mass shootings shows that when assault weapons are used, more than twice as many people are killed on average (10.1 per shooting versus 4.9) and more than ten times as many are shot and injured (11.4 per shooting versus 1.1). See Everytown, Mass Shootings in the United States: 2009-2016 (Apr. 11 2017), Appendix, <https://perma.cc/2PVX-BY5Q>. As for large-capacity magazines, the numbers are similar: Everytown's most recent report, which analyzes mass shooting data from 2009 to 2017, demonstrates that large-capacity magazines were used in 58% of the mass shootings in which magazine capacity was known. In those shootings, twice as many people were killed and 14 times as many were injured. Everytown, Mass Shootings in the United States: 2009-2017 (Dec. 2018), <https://perma.cc/2CED-JUM9>. Everytown's tracking of mass shootings also shows that assault weapons or large-capacity magazines, or both, are invariably used in the most deadly and injurious events. Indeed, in each of the ten deadliest mass shootings in modern American history, a large-capacity magazine was used to perpetrate the crime, and an assault weapon was used in all but three.⁴

As this Court noted in Friedman, mass shootings involving assault weapons and large-capacity magazines are also "highly salient" events that have a unique impact that the people's representatives may consider when weighing policy choices. 784 F.3d at 412. Mass shootings like those that occurred at Virginia Tech, Aurora, Newtown, Tucson, San Bernardino, Orlando, Las ⁴ These shootings are: Las Vegas, Nevada (58 fatalities); Orlando, Florida (49); Blacksburg, Virginia (32); Newtown, Connecticut (26); Sutherland Springs, Texas (26); Killeen, Texas (23); San Ysidro, California (21); Parkland, Florida (17); Austin, Texas (15); and San Bernardino, California (14). See Bonnie Berkowitz, Denise Lu, & Chris Alcantara, The terrible numbers that grow with each mass shooting, Wash. Post., Oct. 1, 2017 (continually updated), <https://goo.gl/3Naj6u>.

Vegas, Sutherland Springs, and Parkland sear themselves into the national consciousness and affect the way people live their everyday lives. See, e.g., Alana Abramson, After Newtown, Schools Across the Country Crack Down on Security, ABC News (Aug. 21, 2013), <http://abcn.ws/1KwN9Ls> (comparing the impact of the Sandy Hook shooting on school security to that of 9/11 on airport security and noting that school districts have spent tens of millions of dollars on security improvements). While shootings on the scale of these tragedies remain statistically rare compared to the plague of day-to-day gun violence, their enormous impact reinforces the compelling justifications for Cook County's law, just as it did for Highland Park's near-identical ordinance. See Friedman, 784 F.3d at 412.

Other social-science research. Additional research—some of which this Court pointed to in Friedman, id. at 411—supports the conclusion reached by Cook County that assault weapons and large-capacity magazines pose significant dangers to public safety.

The evidence here is substantial. State prohibitions on large-capacity magazines are correlated with a 63% lower rate of shootings with three or more injuries or deaths. See Sam Petulla, Here is 1 Correlation Between State Gun Laws and Mass Shootings, CNN.com, Oct. 5, 2017, <https://perma.cc/RN8T-A8WL> (noting Boston University Professor Michael Siegel's conclusion that "[w]hether a state has a [large-capacity-magazine] ban is the single best predictor of the mass shooting rate in that state"). Mass shootings were also 70% less likely to occur between 1994 and 2004, when the federal prohibition on assault weapons and large-capacity magazines was in effect. See Charles DiMaggio, Changes in U.S. Mass Shooting Deaths Associated with the 1994-2004 Federal Assault Weapons Ban: Analysis of Open-Source Data, 86 J. of Trauma and Acute Care Surgery 11, 13 (2018), <https://goo.gl/R8qSgK>; see also Louis Klarevas, Rampage Nation: Securing America from Mass Shootings 240–43 (2016) (finding that, compared with the 10-year period before the federal ban went into effect, the number of gun massacres where six or more people were shot and killed fell by 37% during the ban period and the number of people dying from gun massacres fell by 43%, and that gun massacres increased by 183% and massacre deaths by 239% in the decade after the ban lapsed); Christopher Ingraham, It's Time to Bring Back the Assault Weapons Ban, Gun Violence Experts Say, Wash. Post., Feb. 14, 2018, <https://perma.cc/2BFT-9YSW> (discussing Klarevas's research).

Likewise, several studies indicate that criminals are increasingly using assault weapons and large-capacity magazines in day-to-day gun violence, as evidenced by, for example, the increasing number of large-capacity magazines recovered by police. See, e.g., Brian Freskos, Baltimore Police Are Recovering More Guns Loaded With High-Capacity Magazines, Despite Ban on Sales, The Trace (Mar. 27, 2017), <https://goo.gl/fgWrc7>. Indeed, a recent study found that assault weapons and large-capacity-magazine-compatible firearms “appear to account for 22 to 36% of crime guns in most places, with some estimates upwards of 40% for cases involving serious violence.” Christopher S. Koper, Criminal Use of Assault Weapons and High-Capacity Semiautomatic Firearms: An Updated Examination of Local and National Sources, 95 J. Urb. Health 313 (Oct. 2017), <https://goo.gl/cwgrcq>.

Thus, whether this Court looks to the latest empirical research or dusts off the history books (or simply applies Friedman), the outcome is the same: Cook County's law should be upheld.

CONCLUSION

The district court's judgment should be affirmed.

REPORT OF FIREARMS COMMITTEE

To the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws:

The report of this committee at Buffalo last year showed that following the publication of the Uniform Firearms Act as approved by the Conference and the Bar Association at Denver in July, 1926, some objections raised by the Police Commissioner of New York City through Governor Whitman induced the Executive Committee of the Conference in January, 1927, to recommend to the Conference the withholding of the act from presentation to the states, and the recommitment of the matter to the Firearms Committee for further study and report. (Handbook, 1927, p. 866.) In view of this action of the Executive Committee of the Conference the Executive Committee of the American Bar Association took under reconsideration the approval of the act, this action being approved at the Buffalo meeting. (Bar Assn. Reports, No. 52, 1927, p. 223.)

The Firearms Committee reported at the Buffalo meeting, outlining its efforts to cooperate with the National Crime Commission, which through a subcommittee had drafted and presented to the legislatures the so-called Crime Commission Bill on the subject of firearms regulation. The text of this was printed in display with the text of the Uniform Act. It was pointed out that the Crimes Commission had taken the Uniform Act as the basis of its work, adopting a great deal of it, but with the addition of some new matters, and the change of some of the principles of the Uniform Act. (Handbook, 1927, pp. 866-914.) These matters were also adverted to by President Young in his opening address. (Ibid., p. 453.) In accordance with the recommendations of the committee the Conference voted as follows (Ibid., pp. 267-268, 914):

" 1. That in accordance with action already taken by the Executive Committee the Uniform Firearms Act be withheld from presentation to the legislatures until further action of the Conference.

" 2. That the committee on the Uniform Firearms Act be continued for the purpose of giving further consideration to the objections thereto, for further study of other proposed legislation, for further conferences with the committee of the National Crime Commission, and for further report as to whether or not it is desirable that the act be amended or retained in its present form, or as to what definite disposition should be made thereof."

With the Uniform Act thus back for consideration various meetings have been held during the year between members of the undersigned committee and members of the subcommittee of the National Crime Commission. The final joint meetings were in Washington on April 26-27, 1928, at which were present on behalf of your committee Judge Ailshie and Messrs. O'Connell and Imlay, and on behalf of the subcommittee of the Crime Commission General J. Weston Allen and Mr. J. E. Baum, of the American Bankers Association.

As a result of these meetings and the separate attention given to these matters by your own committee, both in personal conference in Washington, and in an exchange of views by letter, your committee has formulated a proposed revision, printed herewith, of the Uniform Act, incorporating some of the new matter of the Crime Commission Bill, but retaining the basic features of the Uniform Act. In notes accompanying each section, which should be studied in connection with the parallel references in the two acts as printed in last year's report (Handbook, 1927, pp. 878-889), an attempt has been made to indicate the changes. Some of the matters of major importance may be summarized as follows:

1. The revision incorporates the new matter of the Crime Commission Bill on machine guns. Most of the firearms legislation passed in the current year has been on the subject of machine guns, e. g., General Laws of California of 1927, Ch. 552; Acts and Resolves of Mass., 1927, Ch. 326; Mich. Public Acts of 1927, No. 372; N. J. Public Laws 1927, Ch. 95, p. 180. There has been recent legislation on the subject also in Iowa.

2. The revision retains the principle of forbidding the carrying of concealed weapons with strict regulations for identification, but does not require a license to purchase as does the Crime Commission Bill. This constitutes the basic difference between the two acts. Upon this point your committee and the subcommittee of the Crime Commission have been unable to agree.

3. The revision retains the method of the Uniform Act in providing a general penalty section (S. 19) rather than, as in the other act, placing penalty clauses within the various sections.

4. The revision, like the original act, does not fix mandatory sentences, the matter of sentences being left open for the exercise of discretion by the courts.

Upon the basic difference between the two acts mentioned above your committee has bestowed much careful thought. The form of regulation contained in the Uniform Act was adopted by the Conference advisedly. That form is consistent with the forms of regulation which have always obtained and now obtain in the states generally, as the analysis of the subject in the second report of this committee shows. (Handbook, 1925, pp. 854-898.) The system of license to purchase has been for many years the law of New York. It was adopted in Michigan in 1925, being reenacted in the 1927 act mentioned above: it was also adopted in Massachusetts in 1926. (Acts of 1926, Ch. 395.) Beyond those states it has not gone, so far as this committee is advised.

This committee reaffirms the position heretofore taken on this subject, that such a provision is not only out of line with legislative precedents and experience, but is unenforceable. It would make criminals out of law-abiding citizens, and would not be obeyed by the lawless.

A bill drawn very much along the lines of this proposed revision, was introduced into the United States Senate April 16, 1928, by Senator Capper (S. 4086, 70th Cong.) as a local law for the District of Columbia: the same bill was introduced into the House of Representatives a few days later by Representative Frederick J. Zihlman of Maryland, a member of the District of Columbia Committee (No. 13211). The bills are now under consideration before the respective Committees on the District of Columbia of the two houses.

Your committee presents this revision for the consideration of the Conference and recommends its adoption as an act which preserves the results achieved in the work heretofore done on the Uniform Act, and incorporates valuable new material from the Crime Commission Act.
